Ikariam your troops have been reported missing.

If you happen to be online when he counterattacks, you can retreat your blockading single ship to safety. Friedensabkommen anbieten = Peace agreements offer Mail Subject Allianz Rundmail - Circular Message - Alliance Thanks goes to Zullu and Gargamel for several of these. If they are not in your own island group, you must research expansion before you will be able to reach them with trade boats. (Burtletoy) devoir on April 2008 (Devoir)Q: What should I research first?A: Well Digging first. Requests can wait until the person has enough slots available to accept, and everyone wants cultural exchanges. (Darian)Q: What should I do?A: Read the Wiki under useful links, get on IRC, try not to ask questions that are already answered, spend some time reading the thread. (Devoir)Q: I'm attacking a city, with a level X trade port. Set your username by clicking on the button to the left of the IRC input box, and then type in /join #pa ikariam.FAQQ: How do you send goods to other players who aren't on your island?A: Use the world map (or a link from a message they sent to you or from one of your advisors) to locate their island; click on it to get to the island view. After that, go up the seafaring line to expansion. Museums have zero upkeep, so are the best long-term investment in growth you can make. Use chatzilla, it's free. After taverns, work towards getting a museum, and exchange cultural goods with other PAers. Apologise to the owner, say you came in peace and only want to surprise somebody. (Karenna)Q: How do I send someone gold?A: You can't, you can only trade gold via the Trading Post. They will be offered a cultural goods treaty. To get your information added to the list, post your full details as below. So, a L10 wall can seem insurmountable, but plug in 5 spies before the raid, and you can gain a 50% attack bonus! (Karenna)Q: So walls make me VULNERABLE !?!?!A: No. From the Wiki: "Each "possible breach" is a spot that can be rammed by a battering ram each turn; if that is done, the enemy gains 10% OFFENSIVE bonus for each breach opened (maximum number of breaches is that of your wall). (Karenna)Q: Some dude is attacking me! What do I do?A: If the attacker isn't bright enough to blockade your port first, build just one offensive ship (trade ships don't count) at your drydock. (Burtletoy)Q: What happens if I hit 0 gold?A: Citizens will be pulled off research and possibly resource gathering to ensure you have museum slots available. (Darian)Q: What do Karenna Garu Sanderjk these german words mean?A: From the translation thread. After Museums, research Holiday for extra happiness. (Burtletoy)Q: How do I move troops?A: Similar to how you move resources. At higher levels, this WILL hurt, because while the enemy gets 10% attack per breach, you're getting less than the full defensive bonus, AND the 3 point per level extra attack can't compensate for the percentage attack bonus your enemy gets." (Devoir)Q: My account she is hacked! I can't login! Abloo "Kulturgüterabkommen anbieten" instead of message. (Devoir)Q: Am I attacking my own city?A: No, blame it on a bad german translation. A L5 tavern can get your city up to size 10 easily. Q: What happens when I switch my research from one thing to another?A: The points get transfered, you don't "lose" research, but if you finish something you will have to restart the original topic. Sometimes you do not get a message that your troops found their way home so you should look for them from time to time. However, this does not render your wall useless because the wall still gives all your troops defending the town a 3-point offensive bonus per level. How much you gain is directly related to How many trade ships you have available, how many resources are protected by your opponent's warehouse, and how large the trading port is: A town without a trade port can load 3 resources per minute. Ram ships only take 34 mins to build, which is shorter than the time it takes to attack you from the next island over! If you're blockaded, and stand to lose a lot of resources, just destroy your Trading Port (NOT your trading POST). IkariamIn most cases yes, but it may take a significant amount of time (from some hours up to nearly a day). If they did not come back after a day it is very likely that they are lost forever. This will repel the attacker. When you've installed chatzilla, enter "irc://irc.synirc.net/" in your browser address bar, this will open up the irc server. If the military advisers background is not red then it is just your own troops returning/being transfered. Important links Ikariam.COM (US Version) playing on the Beta server. The only time your wall could remotely be considered a liability is if it is not up to your town hall level, and the enemy creates maximum breaches. If you're in a built up area (or paranoid), then go military up to professional army. (Karenna)Q: My people are pissed at me, since my city is crowded!A: Build a Tavern, and make sure you are serving the max amount of wine possible. Chances are you will hit his 1 ship with 10 of yours - leading to vour victory. Build more warships and keep hitting him. blockade his ports and leave 1 ship. That's for Euro trash. A town with a level 1 trade port can load 30 resources per minute A town with a level 3 trade port can load 58 resources per minute (Karenna)O: So I have a Hideout, and I want to spy on my enemies! How do I use them, and what can they do?A: Read this: Of particular note is that each spy in an opponent's town acts as a battering ram when you attacker is losing troops to loot just a couple planks of wood, then you are hurting him. Click on the city, transport goods. Retreat from there leaving 1 ship behind, and occupy another neutral port on another island next to him. Click on the target city, then deploy troops. So your troops still come out on top. You need a barracks at the destination to support the troops being transported. The conventional wisdom of Ikariam is to keep 1 ship in each port, while keeping the rest of your navy in one location. Chatzilla integrates with firefox from memory, and is totally free. But can you actually take initiative and go on the offensive against him? Yes, you can! Build 3-10 ram ships and attack his ports at random - starting with cities that are far away from you. Capture a port on an island next to his. Build 4 warehouses, so he never pillages anything. Build a LV 16+ wall and keep 1 spearman in all cities and 1 warship. This will cause the attacker to waste time. If your attacker is particularly persistent, consider building a wall to level 20. A level 20 will destroy any enemy frontline unit per surviving wall section, even steam giants. Don't forget to relocate your fleet after an attack, because he will see on his battle report from where the attack had come and will come looking for you. Let him hit an empty space! Ikariam is a browser-based Civilization-inspired game with a relatively high level of polish and fun. In this case you will get no battle report apart from that your fleet has been reported missing. Now you know where his main fleet is based. (Karenna)Q: Do cultural points, one cultural points, one cultural points, one cultural points, one cultural points apart from that your fleet has been reported missing. Now you know where his main fleet is based. (Karenna)Q: Do cultural points, one cultural points, one cultural point is gained per level of museum. How many resources can I expect to get?A: Once you win a battle, you get 20 minutes to pillage. This will force him to move his fleet to free his ports. This will make him waste gold and time. Just click "rebel" button and watch the action. The bigger the trading port, the more they can haul away. But you can initiate more offers than you have slots, so it is possible to get a surplus that you will then build into. You will also lose military units due to their upkeep requirements. Of course you may get unlucky and hit his main fleet. I'd suggest then doing Paper, then going up the economy line to Wine Press. Fighting back in this way is fun for you, but embarrassing for him. He may retaliate and occupy your ports with a huge fleet of his. But do not worry, it costs him a lot of gold and he will soon give up. He is even more likely to give up, if your fleet is hidden in a safe secret harbour and you keep hitting his ports despite of him blockading you. You can then negotiate peace with him. Or he will lift the blockading you with 20 ramships, build 40 rams all in one go and rebel. You can see how many hours it will take to build 40 rams, so you can time this event so that you are online when they are ready. (Devoir)Q: Who wants to exchange goods with me?A: Don't post this, just send out requests to people in the list of PA players by Darian. If you can precisely describe how they got lost and if you are sure that you should have gotten them back you may open a ticket at gameforge support - otherwise simply build new units.answered 12 years agoIkariamanswered 12 years agoIkar agoIkariamanswered 12 years agoIkariamanswered agoIkariamasked 12 years agoIkariamasked 12 years ago Obviously if you are a tiny newbie player being attacked by a raging behemoth the best part of valor is discretion.
