Coming to Our Senses

Central Idea: Humans can learn more about their environment than simply what their senses can tell them, and that using scientific tools can help them learn more.

Key Point: Humans can learn more about their environment than simply what their senses can tell them, and that using scientific tools can help them learn more.

Objective Summary:

This unit is designed to introduce students to the concept of using scientific tools to learn more about their environment than just what their senses can tell them. It includes lessons on the five senses, basic scientific methods, and how to use simple tools like magnifying glasses and thermometers. The unit also explores how different environments affect our senses and how we can use this knowledge to better understand the world around us.
